

Project Development Teams in the Indiana CTSI: A resource for investigators

T.J. Sajdyk and S. Denne

School of Medicine

Indiana University – Purdue University Indianapolis

Abstract

The Project Development Team (PDT) program is a unique pilot project program found only at the Indiana CTSI. A PDT is a committee of multidisciplinary researchers who assist investigators in developing ideas/hypotheses into well-designed translational research projects. The teams serve as “one stop shops” by providing investigators access to protocol development; pilot funding; biostatistics; IRB/regulatory and nursing support; facilitation of collaboration with other investigators and access to Core Resources on the IUPUI, IU, Purdue and Notre Dame campuses, all in one meeting. There are currently seven PDTs within the Indiana CTSI.